Family Details

Fred was born in Healey, Batley in 1897 the son of Peter and Sarah Jane Crowther nee Stow. The couple had married on the 1st December 1894.

George William was born in 1895 followed by Fred, Edith Annie 1899 and Miriam 1903. In 1901 the family was living at 60, Healey Street. Batley and the census show that Sarah Jane came from Messingham, Lincolnshire. Peter was a teamer. Within the next decade the family had moved to a two roomed home at 52, Healey Street, Batley. Before he was killed, they had moved to number 42.

As a boy Fred attended Healey Council School and Healey Congregational Church. He worked in the milling department of Messrs. J.T. & J. Taylor's, Cheapside Mills, Batley. He would have been remembered by many as a good scorer for Healey Cricket Club.

Service Details

Fred enlisted in June 1916 and after three months went to France. He did have an operation for appendicitis whilst he was serving. From December 1915 the 3nd Battalion King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry was attached to 97th Brigade in 32nd Division.

The Battle of the Ancre took place between 13th - 18th November 1916. In 1917 they took part in the operations on the Ancre and the pursuit of the German retreat to the Hindenburg Line.

In 1918 they took part in the First Battle of Arras (28th April)

Battle of Amiens (8th August -3rd September)

Fred was wounded on the third day of this battle and was taken to a hospital at Rouen. A comrade wrote: -

"I was very sorry to hear Fred had died from his wounds that he received on August 10. It was on the Somme where he got hit and he was doing his duty like a good soldier, for he was dressing a wounded sergeant at the time he himself was wounded. The bullet went in at his side and came out near the heart."

Fred was awarded the British War Medal and the Victory Medal.

He his remembered with Honour at Healey Congregational Church, Christ Church, Staincliffe and Batley War Memorial.

On 27th April 1912 he married Emily Helen Smith at Primitive Methodist Chapel, Wellington Street, Batley. Mary was born later that year followed by James in 1914. The family resided at 25, Hanover Street, Batley. Mr. & Mrs. Warden and his mother later lived at 15, Surrey Street, Batley.

He was actively connected to Wellington Street Primitive Methodist Church.

Service Details

The 225th Field Company was attached to the 39th Division.

Rockley was called up in October 1916 and he went to France in May 1917. His last letter home he said that he was"in the thick of it". He would have taken part in the Battle of Pilkem Ridge 31st July – 2nd August, the Battle of Langemarck 16th -18th August and the Battle of the Menin Road Ridge 20th - 25th September where he was presumed killed.

The Battle of the Menin Road Ridge, was the third British general attack of the Third Battle of Ypres in the First World War. The battle took place from 20–25 September 1917, in the Ypres Salient in Belgium on the Western Front. During the pause in British and French general attacks between late August and 20 September, the British changed some infantry tactics, adopting the leap-frog method of advance, where waves of infantry stopped once they reached their objective and consolidated the ground, while other waves passed through the objective to attack the next one and the earlier waves became the tactical reserve. General adoption of the method was made possible when more artillery was brought into the salient, by increasing the number of aircraft involved in close air support and by specialising the tasks of air defence, contact-patrol, counter-attack patrol, artillery observation and ground-attack.

In early September, optimism increased among German commanders as the Flanders offensive had been defeated and several divisions and air units were transferred elsewhere. Drier weather and extensive road repairs made it much easier for the British to move vast amounts of supplies forward from the original front line. Visibility increased except for frequent ground fog around dawn, which helped conceal British infantry during the attack, before clearing to expose German troop movements to British observation and attack.

The British infantry succeeded in capturing most of their objectives and then holding them against German counter-attacks, inflicting many casualties on the local German defenders and Eingreifdivisionen sent to reinforce them by massed artillery and small-arms fire. German defences on the Gheluvelt Plateau, which had been retained or quickly recaptured in July and August were lost and the British began a run of success which lasted into early October.

Rockley was awarded the British War Medal and the Victory Medal

He is remembered with Honour at Wellington Street Primitive Methodist Chapel, Batley Working Men's Club and Batley War Memorial.
